

UNM Rural Psychiatry Program Annual Spring Conference Adapting Care for 2021 and Beyond

COVID-19 has had a tremendous impact on people’s health, as well as economic and social situation. Populations in situations of vulnerability are more at risk of the impact of COVID-19, often due to fragile living conditions, loss of income, loss of health insurance, and other drivers that lead to poorer health. These sessions will explore the impact of the COVID 19 pandemic in New Mexico on vulnerable populations, with a focus on delivering care to those with Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities (IDD), adolescent and teen suicide prevention, and a comparative look into of behavioral health services provided via in-person, televideo and telephone. The conference’s goal is to present the strategies to mitigate these impacts; and highlight

Presentations

Session	Time	Title	Presenters
1	9:00am-10:00am	Delivering Care to People with Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities (IDD) During the COVID-19 Pandemic	Martin B Gonzales, MD
2	10:00am-11:00am	Keeping Young People Safe: Suicide Prevention During a Pandemic	Avi Kriechman, MD
3	11:00am-12:00pm	Comparing Televideo and Telephone Behavioral Health Services for People with Chronic Mental Illness	Annette S Crisanti, PhD Jennifer Panhorst, LCSW Justine L Saavedra, MA Caitlin Armijo, MD
Various Continuing Education Credits will be offered

Sponsored by

Psychiatric Medical Association of New Mexico
A District Branch of the American Psychiatric Association

"Physicians Specializing in Psychiatry"